

Kangra Tea

Back from oblivion

creating wealth in the community

Kangra, a district in Himachal Pradesh, is known as the 'cradle of tea'. The plantation and production had almost declined over the years. CSIR developed techniques to revive and regenerate the plantation. New and advanced practices were developed to suit local specific conditions. Improvement in processing methods reduced withering time from 16 to 5 hours, increasing the productivity. These measures helped to increase the production from 4 to 25 lakh kg.
